

PATIENT RECORDS MANAGEMENT SOLUTIONS

PATIENT RECORDS – A HIDDEN COST

Healthcare providers are leaving their practices in record numbers, whether it's to enjoy retirement or to become an employee. Many providers don't realize that they have ongoing responsibility for maintaining their patient records.

The responsibility for maintaining patient records and ensuring HIPAA compliance of patient information rests solely on the shoulders of the provider. Depending on the practice type, this responsibility can be 21 years or more. Storing the records and providing copies to former patients, insurance companies, attorneys, etc. can be expensive and a huge distraction. If not done correctly, it could also result in a HIPAA breach, fines, and notoriety. Not the way to end your career!
